College Book Reports. Chances are, you’ve written more than one book report during your school career. And if you’re taking any English classes in college, you’ll likely be required to do a few more. In college, though, book reports are a little different than the kind most high school teachers expect. This type of assignment also goes by a couple different names, including a “book review” and a “critical review.” High school book reports are mostly about summarizing the book, proving you’ve actually read it.
