Do you have entrepreneurial DNA? Get ready to find out. This 31-question quiz--adapted from the Entrepreneurial Personality Quiz in Instinct: Tapping Your Entrepreneurial DNA to Achieve Your Business Goals, by Thomas L. Harrison--is based on the widely used, five-factor model of personality identified in 1985 by Paul Costa Jr. and Robert McCrae of the National Institute on Aging. Note: Take the quiz before continuing to read about the methodology behind it. You'll give yourself the best chance of answering the questions honestly, rather than trying to select the ones that yield the result you might want to hear. Entrepreneurship is hard enough--if you're fundamentally not suited to it, you'll want to know. Is the ability to succeed in business hardwired into our DNA? Are entrepreneurs, like racing thoroughbreds, simply born to win? Startling and groundbreaking, INSTINCT is the first book to apply the tools and insights of human genome research to the concept of success. Authored by Thomas L. Harrison, a corporate CEO who began his career as a cell biologist, it argues convincingly that successful people, particularly successful entrepreneurs, tend to have certain identifiable talents encoded in their genes. Instincts are a culmination of your heart intelligence, your situational intelligence and your mental intelligence fused together with your unique DNA. They join forces in an instant to send you impulses to move. Instincts and the impulses they send are always about doing something. Instincts are hardwired in your body. They are a guide. But feelings, on the other hand, are in your head. Simple: science. A research study by the University of Alberta found that your instincts help you achieve goals. While studying the brain, they determined that when there's something near you that will help you with both short-term and long-term goals, your brain views it favorably and alerts you with an impulse. Pretty cool, huh? Today pick one goal and tune into the impulses you feel.
