For documents such as basic articles, the output of `\maketitle` is often adequate, but longer documents (such as books and reports) often require more involved formatting. We will detail the process here. There are several situations where you might want to create a title in a custom format, rather than in the format natively supported by LaTeX classes. While it is possible to change the output of `\maketitle`, it can be complicated even with minor changes to the title. In such cases it is often better The title page is the first page of your article, and therefore it is important to have a well-formatted title page that clearly represents your paper. This page should include all the information necessary for a reader to identify the contents of the article, its author(s), origin of the article, and the article type. Tip 1! Although it is the first page of the manuscript, this section is usually written right at the end. You will find exactly what to include in the title page in the Instructions to Authors section of a journal's homepage. An APA title page (student version), includes the title, author's name and affiliation, course name, instructor name, and due date. The student version of the APA title page should include the following information (double spaced and centered): Paper title. Author name. Department and university name. Course number and name. Instructor name. Due date of the assignment. The professional title page also includes an author note (flushed left), but not a course name, instructor name, or due date. Table of contents.
