Bringing the World to the UK: factual international programming on UK public service TV, 2005

---

Is our national press a fading dinosaur? Don't bank on it

Media plurality, the Fox-Sky bid, and the case for referral to Ofcom

Murdoch has had too many favours
How our mainstream media failed democracy

Your BBC needs you

Plurality, policy and the local: can hyperlocals fill the gap?

Four reasons why a partisan press helped win it for the Tories
Barnett, S. 2015. Four reasons why a partisan press helped win it for the Tories. in: Jackson, Daniel and Thorsen, Einar (ed.) UK election analysis 2015: media, voters and the campaign Bournemouth Centre for the Study of Journalism, Culture and Community. pp. 91

Plurality and public sector broadcasting: why and how PSBs deserve protection

The state of UK hyperlocal community news: findings from a survey of practitioners

Can charity save the local press?

'And what good came of it at last?' Press–politician relations post-Leveson

Crisis? What crisis? The real BBC catastrophe is yet to happen

Should journalists be regulated?

Leveson past, present and future: the politics of press regulation

Plurality, Leveson and the threat to the BBC

Stories from faraway places: international reporting, public service television and a glass half full

Why the press must learn from the history and reputation of British television

Public interest: the public decides

From Callaghan to credit crunch: changing trends in British television news 1975-2009

Broadcast journalism and impartiality in the digital age: six fallacies and a counter-factual

It's ownership, stupid: why plurality lies at the heart of media policy reform - and how to achieve it

Imposition or empowerment? Freedom of speech, broadcasting and impartiality
Crusaders or pigs in raincoats?

The rise and fall of television journalism: just wires and lights in a box?

Introduction: whither the public interest in the new political economy?

Media ownership policy in a recession: redefining the public interest

A familiar assault on the BBC: a response to David Graham's report for the Adam Smith Institute

Why the BBC matters: memo to the new parliament about a unique British institution

Minding the regional news gap

Uutisjournalismin kehitys USA:ssa ja Britanniassa [changing trends in television news in the US and Britain]

Periodismo, democracia e interés público [Media, democracy and the public interest]

What's wrong with media monopolies? A lesson from history and a new approach to media ownership policy

TV news and the echo of Murrow

Can the public service broadcaster survive? Renewal and compromise in the new BBC Charter

The case against auctioning spectrum

Crisis, what crisis? Why young people are not deserting political television

Beyond a critical press

Reasons to be cheerful

Can the BBC invigorate our political culture?

Opportunity or threat? The BBC, investigative journalism and the Hutton Report

Hello sky, goodbye world

Media ownership policies: pressure for change and implications
The world on the box: international issues in news and factual programmes on UK television 1975-2003

Which end of the telescope? From market to cultural value

Can the BBC survive?

How to achieve accountability for OFCOM

Will a crisis in journalism provoke a crisis in democracy?

A licence for future media power

Impartiality redefined: protecting news on commercial television in Britain

Westminster tales: the twenty-first century crisis in British political journalism

Half-baked plans for broadcasting

Distorting democracy: public opinion, polls and the press

Usage statistics

26 total views
0 total downloads
1 views this month
0 downloads this month

These values are for the period from September 2nd 2018, when this repository was created
United Kingdom had experienced a decade and a half of growth which was marked by an increasing dominance of the service sector, particularly knowledge-intensive. E. Uyarra et al. UK television market for the period of its primary rights licence. Nettleton and governance of public procurement in the UK, we next describe the extent to which public procurement has become a part of the innovation policy portfolio. With the aid of short case studies we explore the reach and limitations of the policy approaches and instruments used and draw conclusions on why the desired level of dissemination and impact has yet to be achieved. 234 E. Uyarra et al. UK television market for the period of its primary rights licence. independent production companies to exercise their exploitation rights in the UK secondary market prior to the expiry of the BBC’s primary licence. Ensure the same principles relating to release apply consistently irrespective of which company is distributing the rights in the BBC commissioned content. For a trial period of 6 months from 1st January 2011, for factual programmes only, on any consents granted, a Transmission Day shall mean up to 4 transmissions per 24 hours on the Channel and 4 transmissions per 24 hours on its genuine Channel+1 service. 5. All UK programmes commissioned from UK production companies, mainly SMEs, across Britain (no in-house production unlike BBC, ITV and Sky). Our overall contribution to the UK’s creative economy is disproportionate to our size. We grow small businesses across the whole of the UK and our formats are successful around the world. CREATIVE GREENHOUSE. We make a huge contribution to the UK’s economy. 850. employees. of viewers said Channel 4’s factual programmes inspired change in their lives. “Channel 4 is prepared to approach news with attitude in a way no other public service broadcaster could do. I’m not entirely sure how they get away with it, but it enriches British broadcast journalism.”