Parental care is a behavioural and evolutionary strategy adopted by some animals, involving a parental investment being made to the evolutionary fitness of offspring. Patterns of parental care are widespread and highly diverse across the animal kingdom. There is great variation in different animal groups in terms of how parents care for offspring, and the amount of resources invested by parents. For example, there may be considerable variation in the amount of care invested by each sex, where females Parents and children are a two-for-one deal: Developing positive relationships with parents is critical to providing the best care possible to their children. But sometimes you already have a relationship with the childâ€™s parentsâ€”they may be related to you, live in your neighborhood, or be friends or acquaintances. This can be a real benefit since you might already share an open, trusting relationship with the parents. But this familiarity can also raise some challenges when you are caring for their children. Even when your relationship with a parent(s) is warm and positive, sharing the care o Caring for an aging parent is a complex task. When dementia care is part of the picture, it becomes a lot more difficult. Cognitive and behavioral changes from dementia can occur unpredictably, and parents may resist care. If you are a caregiver for a senior with dementia, the most important thing is to first understand the disease. Although Alzheimerâ€™s disease is just one type of dementia, it is the one with the most pronounced stages. Alzheimerâ€™s is a progressive condition, meaning symptoms increase in severity as time goes on.
